Product overview Steltman chair (1963)

Rietveld started and ended his architect career converting a jewellers' shop. He designed the Steltman chair and its mirror image with white leather upholstery for the jeweller Steltman. The asymmetric form does not define the space, but has an open structure to which Rietveld aspired in the furniture he designed in 1918-1924.

Product overview Steltman chair

Design:

This asymmetric chair has now been made without upholstery according to his last drawing. In its manufacture, a high-quality oak was chosen. This very solidly constructed chair is available, in the left and right design, in the colours whitewash, clear varnish, black and red.

Every piece of furniture is fitted with a chip, a number and an associated certificate.
