Product overview Calvé Garden Park Bench (1959)

Rietveld never named his products other than chair / armchair / sofa etc. For clarity, people started using names which had their origin in the client, material or purpose.

The first and presumably only one was once made for the 75th anniversary of the Calvé factory in Delft. Rietveld actually included the name of Calvé in the drawing.

Design:

The bench has a stainless steel frame and Bilinga hardwood beams are used for seat, back and optionally for the armrests. This Brazilian wood naturally carries the FSC label. The colour of the wood depends on which part of the tree is used and will eventually turn grey through weathering. The bench comes without further treatment. The frame is made of stainless steel and the wooden beams are fixed with stainless steel bolts and screws.

The benches are fitted with nuts that are welded on under the legs and into which the provided metal screws (M12) can be secured, thus providing a simple means of anchorage in, for example, concrete.

Also, 30 mm plastic runners are fitted under the steel legs to make sure the steel never directly touches the surface on which it stands. These tops come in very handy when the bench is placed upon a terrace.

Each bench is supplied with a chip, a number and a matching certificate.
